No. 373.

GIFTS AND DECORATIONS TO OFFICERS OF THE UNITED STATES BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS.

MARCH 10, 1910.- Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ROOT, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, submitted the following REPORT.

[To accompany S. 7096.]

The Committee on Foreign Relations having had under consideration applications under Article I, section 9, paragraph 7, of the Constitution, reports as follows:

The paragraph provides:

No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States; and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them, shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title of any kind whatever from any king, prince, or foreign state.

There are now pending in the Committee on Foreign Relations 200 requests for the consent of Congress under this constitutional provision to the acceptance of gifts and decorations tendered by foreign governments to officers of the United States. The subject-matter of all these requests is described in the accompanying pamphlet, in which we have numbered the requests from 1 to 200, inclusive. It seems that requests of this character should be passed upon in accordance with some declared principle of action, so that one officer should not have his request refused and another receive authority as the result of accidental circumstances attending the presentation of the request.

The existence of the prohibition in the Constitution indicates that the presumption is against the acceptance of the present, emolument, office, or title. A habit of general and indiscriminate consent by Congress upon such applications would tend practically to nullify the constitutional provision, which is based upon an apprehension, not without foundation, that our officers may be affected in the performance of their duties by the desire to receive such recognition from other governments. A strong support for the view that the practice should not be allowed to become general is to be found in the fact that the Government of the United States does not confer decorations or titles or, unless in very exceptional cases, make presents to the officers of other governments. It is not suitable that we should permit our officers to receive courtesies which we do not reciprocate by extending similar courtesies to the officers of other governments. We are of the opinion that the following rules should be observed:

1. That no decoration should be received unless possibly when it is conferred for some exceptional, extraordinary, and highly meritorious act, justifying beyond dispute a special mark of distinction.

2. That no presents should be received except such articles as are appropriate for souvenirs and marks of courtesy and appreciation and having an intrinsic value not disproportionate to such a purpose.

3. That the acceptance of presents within the limitation above stated should be further limited to cases in which some exceptional service or special relation justifying the mark of courtesy exists between the recipient and the government offering the present.

4. That no offer of any other title or emolument or office should be considered.

5. We consider that membership in learned societies, even though the appointment thereto may have a quasi governmental origin, should not be considered as coming within the constitutional provision, and it may well be that as to certain trifling gifts, such as photographs, the rule of de minimis lex non curat should be deemed to apply.

Applying the foregoing rules, we recommend that the consent of the Congress be given to the acceptance of the presents offered to officers of the United States in the cases identified in the annexed pamphlet as Nos. 1 to 8 inclusive, 28 (the present but not the decoration), 29, 31 to 35 inclusive, 36, 84, 85, 86, 98 to 100 inclusive, 106, 125, 134, 144, 147, 174, 188, 197. We recommend that consent be refused in all the other cases specified in the pamphlet, including all the offers of decorations. We omit consideration of No. 77, which has been acted on by the Congress.

I. Requests for authority to accept certain gifts and decorations to officers of the United States by foreign governments, pending before the Committee on Foreign Relations June 23, 1906.

II. Requests for authority to accept certain gifts and decorations transmitted by the State Department to the Committee on Foreign Relations from June 23, 1906, to February 15, 1910.
